About National Law School of India University:

The National Law School of India University, known to be an Institution of Excellence in Legal Education and Research, came into existence through a Notification under the National Law School of India University Act (Karnataka Act 22 of 1986). It signified the culmination of efforts by the Judiciary, the Bar Council of India, the Karnataka Bar Council, Bangalore University, and the Government of Karnataka, to reform legal education and to establish a centre of excellence for legal education and research in India.

The Chief Justice of India is the Chancellor of the University. These connections lend a stature and prestige to the School which is unparalleled in the history of legal education in India. The Karnataka Act confers complete administrative and academic autonomy which facilitates innovation and experimentation in the pursuit of excellence in legal education.

The Law School has the social responsibility of continuing to be a Centre of Excellence in the field of legal education, a position which it came to occupy within the first ten years itself due mainly to the dedicated efforts of the Faculty and students during those initial and formative years. Globalization has thrown up new challenges, and the professional legal education has to cater to the growing demands for skilled legal professionals who can effectively function in the emerging legal order of internationally acceptable levels of excellence.

The National Law School of India University, oldest of the 'law Schools', is well known for its role in 'redefining' the legal education in India. The Law School offers degree via both regular and distance education learning mode. The regular courses are the integrated undergraduate B.A., LLB (Hons) programme, one year postgraduate LLM programme in Business Laws and Human Rights. The Law School has also started a two year postgraduate interdisciplinary course on Masters in Public Policy. This programme is open to graduates of any discipline.

About Refresher Course

National Law School of India University from its very beginning has been involved in organizing U.G.C. – Sponsored Refresher Courses for law teachers aimed to advance the quality of teaching and research in all branches of law both at the graduate and post-graduate levels. The duration of the courses varied between one week to three weeks and the subject areas extended to substantive and procedural courses.

On line with the above, the present Refresher Course will look at the syllabus, study materials and teaching methods of Constitutional Law, International Law, Environmental Law, Human Rights Law, Contract Law, Business Law and Arbitration Law. Updating recent developments in knowledge and skills on the laws as well as emerging tools and techniques for better teaching/learning of these subjects will be the focus of the course.

About the Programme

The objective of this one week program is to understand the various methods, skills required for law teaching and the mechanism to adapt in classroom exercises. The contextual approach to teaching law presumes that the gap between legal theories, principles, their application and practice, is quite wide. Yet law surrounds everything of our daily lives of social, economic and political accounting. Can our law programme be systematically strengthened? Can our legal education not only be socially relevant, intellectually stimulating, professionally competent but also be practically significant? Can our legal education expand beyond merely imparting the knowledge of law and be able to motivate the concerned to develop analytical and practical skills of self-learning? Does legal education orient towards the crucial ingredient as to identifying legal issues and provide the necessary analysis? Can we impart the fact that a mere acquisition of legal vocabulary is insufficient to facilitate an understanding of legal materials? Is a law student's perception of 'presentation skill' in effect very different than what is generally expected from the Bench and Business Manager's interpretation of the same? Is it relevant for legal education to move from teaching methods to teaching processes- like setting teaching goals, developing a methodology, evolving techniques to connect teaching and learning, and realisation that one method does not fit all subjects. Can teachers realise that students with speaking issues may have strong abilities to express in writing? Likewise, can they realise that a teaching style can only be developed based on a deeper understanding of the learning style of the students. That methodology accepts that diversity of laws and uncertainty in public policy may be legitimate. That legal education must encourage the need for diverse opinion and arguments advanced. Can we and should we have alternate methods? Through exchange of experience, the course expects to adopt best practices and innovative methods in teaching and research in Law.
