About National Law School of India University, Bengaluru

The National Law School of India University, the Nation's premier law university, came into existence through a Notification under the National Law School of India University Act (Karnataka Act 22 of 1986). It signified the culmination of efforts by the Judiciary, the Bar Council of India, the Karnataka Bar Council, the Bangalore University and the Government of Karnataka to reform legal education and to establish a centre of excellence for legal education and research in India.

The Chief Justice of India is the Chancellor of the University. The Chairman, Bar Council of India, is the Chairman of the General Council. These connections lend a stature and prestige to the School which is unparalleled in the history of legal education in India. The Karnataka Act confers complete administrative and academic autonomy which facilitates innovation and experimentation in the pursuit of excellence in legal education. The Law School has undertaken many research projects funded by the UGC, the Government of India, the Government of Karnataka, the Department of Women and Child Development, UN agencies, the World Bank, HIVOS etc. These have served to strengthen research and teaching at the Law School.

About the Workshop

Post the 1991 Economic Reforms India has seen an upsurge in international trade, investment and commercial transactions. This upsurge has also been accompanied by an increase in cross-border commercial disputes in India, which has necessitated an efficient dispute resolution mechanism.

Taking these factors into account and with the aim of having a time-efficient and cost-effective method of settling cross-border disputes, international commercial arbitration has emerged as a preferred choice of multiple parties. India in 1996 adopted the Arbitration and Conciliation Act in line with the new developments that were taking place in the sphere of commercial dispute resolution. This legislation aimed at providing an efficacious and speedy dispute resolution mechanism and a suitable alternative to the domestic judicial system that was marred with excessive delay and backlog of cases.

The enforcement and execution of arbitral awards, both domestic and foreign are governed by the Arbitration and the Conciliation Act, 1996 read with the Civil Procedure Code, 1908 in India. India is also a signatory to the Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards, 1958 as well as the Geneva Convention on the Execution of Foreign Arbitral Awards, 1927. According to these conventions, if a party receives a binding award from a country which is a signatory to them and the award is made in a territory which has been notified as a convention country by India, the award would then be enforceable in India.

In India, the 1996 Act deals with the substantive law that governs the enforceability and execution of an award and the Civil Procedure Code deals with the procedures that are to be followed when seeking an execution of an award. The award can be enforced under the Code of Civil procedures unless challenged under the 1996 Act and when the time period for filing the objections has expired or the objections have been rejected. The arbitral award is final and binding under the Arbitration and Conciliation Act on the parties to the dispute.

Aspects such as challenging a foreign arbitral award in domestic courts, the role of the domestic Courts in enforcement of a foreign arbitral award and conditions for the enforcement of arbitral awards also need to be studied carefully.

The laws relating to Arbitration and international commercial dispute settlement become even more crucial taking into account the current position of India which has around 83 Bilateral Investment Treaties with multiple nations. The country promises to be one of the most attractive destinations for FDI but is also a party to multiple investor-state arbitrations filed against it by foreign investors. A few cases are still pending against it and the country has already lost two cases.

Such a study becomes necessary taking into consideration the fact that India recently has given notice of unilateral termination of 58 Bilateral Investment Treaties (BIT) and is in process of signing some crucial BITs as well. This seems to indicate that India intends to sign anew Bilateral Investment Treaties based on the Model BIT that it published in 2015 replacing all the existing BITs.

Understanding, analytically the processes of international commercial arbitration and enforcement of such arbitral awards becomes imperative given the number of international commercial disputes against India. These issues also need to be focused upon in light of the Arbitration and Conciliation (Amendment) Ordinance, 2015 amending the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 to understand its implications on such arbitral awards.

When looking at enforcement trends of arbitral awards one must also focus on the distinction and the similarities that exist in common and civil law countries since an arbitral award can be enforced in most countries and such enforcement is recognized by the Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards, 1959. There are very few nations that are not party to this Convention and the rules concerning the recognition and enforcement of arbitral awards in different jurisdiction need to be understood. The grounds of challenge for the refusal of recognition and enforcement of the award such as the ground of public policy and the interpretation of the same by Courts across jurisdictions also need to be discussed.

The Two Day International Seminar on Enforcement Trends of Arbitral Awards intends to look at these matters from an analytical lens and understand the practical implications of such legal developments in the area of international commercial arbitration.
